HANSMAN IN COLUMBIA COURT COMPETITION

Carl A. Hansman of Bethel recently took part in the Harlan Fisk Stone moot court competition at Columbia University Law School where he is a member of the first year class. The competition, named after the Supreme Court justice and former dean of the law school, consists of argument on hypothetical cases among teams representing their respective moot court clubs and culminates with a trial by third year students before justices of the New York Court of Appeals under the auspices of the New York State Bar Association. Hansman is a member of Murray moot court, one of 18 such organizations which finished in third place among the first year courts. After graduating from Gould Academy Hansman continued his education at Cornell where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Delta Phi.

SURPRISE PARTY

The S. of U. V. Auxiliary tendered a surprise party Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hutchinson in honor of the 40th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Lapham. The evening was pleasantly passed with Fitch. High score was won by Mrs. Lapham. The guests of honor were the recipients of several nice gifts. Refreshments of sandwiches, cake and coffee were served by members of the order.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Asa Bartlett, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hutchinson, Mrs. Wallace Coolidge, Mrs. Alton Hutchinson, Mrs. Decia Foster, Mrs. Ellen Littlehale, Mrs. L. A. Sumner, Mrs. Fred Wheeler, and Earl Hutchinson.

The Oxford County Council of the American Legion met with the George A. Mundt Post Tuesday evening. Preceding the meeting which started at 8 o'clock the Sons of Legion Drum Corps of Rumford led a parade of the several Posts represented from the County. Besides representatives from each Post in the County there were visitors from Livermore and Lewiston. Each of the officials present gave a talk.

The Girl Scout troop committee will meet Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock with Lieutenant Marion O'Brien. Members are urged to attend to hear Mrs. O'Brien's report of the New England Conference which she attended at Portland last week and to discuss the new program.

The street signs in the village, which were put up by the Corporation several years ago, have been refinished in aluminum and black by the Chamber of Commerce. These have not been easily read for some time and the improvement is very noticeable. If the number of these signs could be doubled so that all intersections could be marked in both directions, it would be an added convenience to strangers.

Maine People Urged to Buy Maine Canned Corn

An appeal for Maine people to support the drive to sell more Maine canned corn has been made by Commissioner of Agriculture Frank P. Washburn. Stating that "loyalty should begin at home" he said that sales in Maine had not increased on a par with other states, since the campaign got underway.

Corn canners recently subscribed to a fund for a sales program to be supervised by the Maine Development Commission. Advertising in the leading newspapers of many of the Eastern States has brought fine results. It is winning new friends and customers for this splendid product.

Washburn said that Maine people should be the most interested as the corn industry is a large one and unless last season's pack is sold out many factories will not open.

He suggested that every family put in a case or two this week and plan to serve canned corn dishes several times a week.

Dietitians, he said, had highly recommended canned sweet corn.

BETHEL COUPLE SHOWERED

Mr. and Mrs. Marthus Philbrick were surprised last Thursday evening when about 30 of their friends went to their home on the Songo Pond road and presented the couple a large clothesbasket filled with gifts in honor of their recent marriage. The basket was decorated in pink and white to represent a huge maybasket. Many sent gifts who were unable to attend. A miniature four tier wedding cake was made and presented to the couple by Mrs. Beatrice Foster.

GOULD'S HISTORY IN GRADUATION PLAY

"The Tower of Memories" to Review School's History 1836-1936—Dr. Hanscom, Baccalaureate Speaker

The Class of 1938 is exceedingly proud to be able to announce that Dr. Frank E. Hanscom, Principal Emeritus of Gould Academy, will deliver the Baccalaureate Address on Sunday, June 5, which will be held in the Congregational Church at 2:30.

"The Tower of Memories"

The history of Gould's Century of existence is the theme of the Commencement pageant to be given in the William Bingham Gymnasium on Thursday, June 9. Its title, "The Tower of Memories," and a prologue are by Walter L. Bissell, who has furnished so many of Gould's most interesting pageants, and the rest of the pageant was written by Miss Ruth Leavenworth, Dramatic Coach at Gould. By means of research in school catalogs of Gould's earliest years and Academy Herald from 1877 up to the present, most interesting bits of lore and amusing anecdotes have been incorporated into the story of the actual growth of the school from 1836 to the centennial year. The characters of the pageant are Memories of some of Gould's most important years who pay special tribute to the many personages who have been responsible for the growth and development of Gould.

An interesting detail of the pageant will be the projection of pictures, which, from time to time, will augment the verbal memories of the cast. Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Bailey are in charge of the technical side of the presentation of the slides.

The cast is as follows:

Prologue, Royden Keddy
Keeper, Bryant Bean
Memory of 1838, Nancy Philbrook
Memory of 1836, Elizabeth Lyon
Memory of 1842, Jessie Brooks
Memory of 1852, Edward Robertson
Memory of 1877, Ethel Jodrey
Memory of 1897, Donald Brown
Memory of Reunion of 1900, Patricia Goodwin
Memory of School Events, Florice Grover
Memory of Early Athletic Activities, Robert Keniston
Memory of 1911, Vivian Berry
Memory of 1933, John King

Gorham Nine at Gould Saturday

On Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock the Gorham, N. H., team will play Gould in a return engagement. The local boys won their opening game of the season at Gorham 11-4 but since then Gorham has come a long way. They have won victories regularly in the White Mountain League of which they are members. Gould should win this game, providing they don't get over confident, but it should be a battle well worth watching. It's been years since Gould has beaten Gorham twice in one season of baseball.

SOUTH PARIS PLAYS GOULD WEDNESDAY

On Wednesday, May 25th, Winston Willey's South Paris nine will make an appearance on the Gould Athletic Field in a final effort to gain a sports victory over Gould this year. The game at South Paris was a "nip and tuck" affair most of the way and this return game should be an exciting one. This game is scheduled to start at 3:30 with Lurvey and Morgan as umpires.

Rev. H. T. Wallace has gone to Portland today (Thursday) to meet Mrs. Wallace, who has been in Boston this week.

MAIL PLANE LANDS HERE

Mail dispatched on the special Air Mail flight from Bethel today included 266 letters. Pilot Roland Maheux of Auburn, who made the trip, landed his "Silver Cub" plane near the Peterkin barn on the Alder River intervalle, instead of at West Bethel as announced, and the crowd gathered there to greet it was disappointed. The incoming mail was light.

Poppy Day to be Observed May 28

Preparations for the observance of Poppy Day, Saturday, May 28th, are being completed by George A. Mundt Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary. Arrangements are being directed by Marjorie McAllister, chairman of the Poppy Day committee, assisted by workers from the Unit.

Honor the World War dead and aid the war's living victims, is the meaning of the memorial poppy. The poppy, which bloomed so strikingly among the trenches and battle graves in France and Belgium, became the flower of the dead during the war. Ever since the war it has been worn in all English-speaking countries annually as an individual tribute to the men who gave their lives in the conflict.

The little red flower takes significance from the fact that it is made by the war disabled, and that it contributes to the welfare of the disabled men and the dependent families of veterans. Everyone who wears a poppy on Poppy Day, not only is showing remembrance and honor for the men who died in the war, but is giving help to those who still are bearing the burdens of the war in suffering, privation and lost opportunities. All contributions made for the flowers will go to support the rehabilitation and welfare work of the Legion and Auxiliary which means so much to the disabled veterans and the families of the dead and disabled.

The women of George A. Mundt successful Poppy Day this year and Unit are making great efforts for a are hoping that everyone in Bethel will catch the spirit of the day, and will join with them in "honoring the dead and aiding the disabled."

The Townsend Club will hold their meeting at the Grange Hall Friday evening. Rev. Alton Vorrill of West Bethel will be the speaker.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Childs of Boston are visiting their daughter, Mrs. Barbara Preble, and son, who are living at the Gilbert Tuell house on Broad Street.

Mrs. Wilkinson's Way Out

SHORT STORY

MRS. WILKINSON was a cheerful soul in spite of her affliction, and was by no means disheartened when the agent for the little house she rented told her that she would have to get out or pay in advance as it would for me to pay in six months, far's that's concerned, 'cause I can't do either. I haven't got a thing in this world except some bills for poor Jim's last sick spell, an' his lodge is gon' to pay them. Lord bless 'em."

"Well, you know, Mrs. Wilkinson, it isn't my house, or I'd say stay where you are, but an agent has to carry out the wishes of his clients."

"Oh, I'm not blamin' you at all. Fact is, I'm not blamin' anybody. That's all right. I'll look around and try to think up somethin' I can do. If you could give me a week—"

"Why, dear Mrs. Wilkinson, what could you do, crippled as you are?" He was plainly shocked.

"That's what I got to think out," she said calmly. "An' I reckon I'm not on charity yet."

The agent ignored her words and raising his hat walked out the front door of the shabby little four-room house.

"Lord, that vine out there's like a child to me. Won't nobody love it the way I do, an' my canna bed an' all the work I done inside this house. Mo an' Jim put that wallpaper on—every bit of it." Her eyes swept the familiar walls at a glance. She felt a warm tear rolling down her cheek.

"Myra Wilkinson, you're gittin' plumb sorry for yourself," she said it with vehemence of one addressing another person, a habit she had formed through nearly 40 years of days spent alone. "Now, the Lord meant you to have a home, an' this is the home He meant you to have, so get to work and find a way o' keepin' it."

Children playing in the street stopped and called a friendly greeting to her. Strangers passed and looking up and seeing her sitting there apparently so calm, smiled unconsciously. She was such a pleasant sort of person.

A young couple, evidently from the country, strolled by looking long at the waving waterlilies blooms and then at Mrs. Wilkinson and the neat little house. She watched them out of sight and wondered who they were. About five minutes later they came down the street again and this time they stopped, and coming up her steps asked politely for a drink of water. Mrs. Wilkinson liked them at once.

"You'll have to step in the kitchen and get it yourself, honey. I'm a cripple an' it's such a bother to move. Glasses in the kitchen cabinet, up in the right hand corner. Ain't been in town long, have you?" she asked when they came out again.

"No," said the girl; "we—we're— we slipped off an' not married last Tuesday, an' W'll's got a job at the foundry, an' I'm gon' to work at the ten-cent store. If we could only find a place to stay where we wouldn't have to pay too much— Boardin's so high," she ended sadly.

It was then that an idea popped full-fledged into Mrs. Wilkinson's head.

"Why couldn't you let me keep house for you an' you stay here?" she asked excitedly. "I wouldn't charge you nothin' 'cept the house rent an' what I'd eat. The rent's only $12 a month."

"I think it would be wonderful," said the girl, "but we'd have to pay you something."

"Lan' now, child, hush. We'll start thataway anyhow, an' when your husband gits a raise we can talk about somethin' else. Just step right into the bedroom to the left and lay off your things an' then we can see about gettin' supper. I expect W'll'll have to go get some steak an' butter. I got everything else an' a cherry pie already baked."

The girl joyfully threw her arms around the older woman's neck. "Mother Wilkin'—," she said softly, "I been so lonesome since I left home with nothin' but strangers everywhere, an' now I know I'm gon' to be happy."

Courtship in Mexico
Courtship is a fine art in Mexico. A young man who likes a girl at first studiously avoids her. After two or three weeks, he may give her a significant glance. Then comes a night of serenading, when he stands outside her window and strums a guitar. Soon after that, negotiations begin between her parents and his, and he sends her a rose.

THE LOW DOWN —from— HICKORY GROVE

Things are better. It is as plain as the nose on your face, as my father used to say. Or, if you want to go back a lot farther, it is as plain as the handwriting on the wall.

And the handwriting on the wall, everybody
maybe does not remember just
when it happened,
so I will tell you.
It was in Bel-
shazzar's time.
Belshazzar was a
king of Babylon.
And they were having a feast, and in the middle of it, a hand appeared, and wrote.
And the writing was not in their tongue and the wise men could not interpret it.

But the Queen showed up, and she said a person called Daniel could read anything. So they sent for Daniel—and sure enough, the Queen was right. And the writing said that the days of the kingdom were numbered, and it had been weighed and found wanting.

And anybody who can forget a cross-word puzzle for 3 minutes,
they can read all of the fifth chapter of Daniel and get the whole story, first hand. And Congress, I reckon, it has already been doing no.

UPTON HAPPY 4-H CLUB

The Upton Happy 4-H Club held their tenth regular meeting May 13
at North Newry. Those present were: Leader, Mrs. Isabelle Fuller;
Assistant Leader, Miss Caroline
Patterson; Misses Pearl, Elita, Viola, Anne Barnett, Marion Colby, Frances Fuller and Ida Peaslee.
They hired one of Wight's Brook Camps in which to spend the weekend. Friday evening they joined the Newry people at a box social in the Tide school. Saturday morning the girls all went for a hike to Serew Auger Falls. In the afternoon they divided into scrub teams and played baseball. After supper the leaders arranged a hunt. They hid several articles in the woods around the camp. Pearl Barnett found the most articles and was named the winner. Before going to bed, Miss Patterson told the group some spooky stories. The heavy rain during the night did not dampen the fun, although some of the girls and many articles of clothing became wet.

Sunday morning the girls held a church service. Mrs. Fuller delivered the sermon, while Miss Patterson acted as worship leader. After dinner the party broke up amid laughter, yawning from sleeplessness and raindrops.

"THANK you, thank you kindly,
sir," murmured little Ma Bixby, her flushed cheeks as pink as the cheek fluttering in her nervous grasp.

Barney Littlefield, purchasing agent plenipotentiary of the I. I. & N. railway, was not prepared for such manifestations of delight. The amount of the check was less than one-third of his estimate for the property—he was sure to receive commendations from his superiors for his acuteness—yet, there was more chagrin than satisfaction visible in his hard blue eyes. It had been in just such a clean little,
mean little kitchen that 20 years before he took leave of just such a wrinkled, trembling, timid little woman. Her final admonition, weeping and prayerful, "Be a good boy, Barney," came to him across the years faintly, rebukingly.

"Sall right," he muttered and turned on his Scotch brogue heel
and was gone.

Trembling and tearful with delight, Ma Bixby flustered into the sitting room and took up a much-handled catalogue of ladies' and children's wear. "I know you won't like it, Hiram, dear," looking up apologetically into the badly-focused eyes of the alleged likeness in crayon of her late husband, which,

draped with a tasseled silk "throw,"
stood on an easel in the corner.
"But I ain't really spent no money on clothes since my transience were out, and I always did just love pretty clothes—jes' seems like I can't help it. Besides, if I don't like these things I can return them and get my money back. It says so right here in the book on every page 'most."

"After all," she defended herself to herself, "there's nothing foolish or extravagant on the list unless it might be the fuzzy white sweater set for Elvory Thompson's baby girl."

Going to hang up the broom, preparatory to returning to the sitting-room and her list, she caught sight of Ernestine Biggers on her way to the interurban station and rapidly changed her plan of shopping by smiling to the more thrilling one of shopping in person.

The girl, responding to her frantic signals on the window, came up the narrow flagged path and into the kitchen. "In a big hurry, child?"
she asked eagerly, wistfully. "Going to the city, bent you?" Would it be too much bother if I went with you? Now ain't that kind! I'll be ready in no time and I'll explain later, on the train, what I'm going for and all."

But once settled on the car, the wan sadness of the girl's face touched her and attracted her attention from her own fine plans. A few gentle questions and the girl, happily, ashamedly, poured into the sympathetic ear of her confidante all her heart's pent-up discouragement and despair. Her promise to marry young Luke Endicott on the neighboring farm, his need of her in view of his mother's fast-failing health, and the absolute impossibility of making her school salary do more than cover the bills that piled up during her father's illness. Even the most modest outfit was out of the question.

"But I don't know what possesses
me to be whining like this to you, Miss Bixby. I'm ashamed of myself. I certainly am. What's clothes, after all, and a few towels and bureau scarfs and things? I've promised, and I know Luke understands how I am fixed. I never should have bothered you with it.
We're not far from the city now.
My errand won't take long; the school committee wanted me to see the publishers about the new arith-metics. After that I'll take you anywhere you'd like to go."

A dear good girl, Ma Bixby thought as she sat alone, and just the age that Rita would have been.
Going to marry with no outfit at
all. She recalled with the accustomed thrill of pride her trouseau of 40 years past. Every girl, she decided, is entitled to a trouseau. It is her inalienable right.
But was it business of hers, Martha Bixby's, if a neighbor girl were deprived of illness of a wedding outfit? She had not answered the question to her entire satisfaction when Ernestine returned.

"Well, I'll make it business of mine," she silently declared. "An old lady like me can do better than buy clothes for herself."

And make it her business she did —so efficiently that passengers on the last out-bound car must look more than once to discover Ma Bixby and Ernestine Biggers under the mountain.

On her lap pretty things for a bride the age of Rita; in her hand
the fuzzy white sweater suit for a baby the age of Rita, in her heart
the yearning love of an ageless Rita; Ma Bixby smiled across the parcels into the shyly grateful eyes of Ernestine Biggers.

Mass. Senator Recommends Highway Lighting for Safety

T. R. Plunkett Deplores Bay State Fatality Record

Adequate highway lighting as a method of curbing night traffic fatalities is recommended by State Senator T. R. Plunkett. The deplorable accident record and particularly the abnormal night accident experience on Bay State highways were the primary reasons for an investigation initiated by the Joint Legislative Committee on Highways and Motor Vehicles of which he is a member.

T. R. Plunkett by the Joint Legislative Committee on Highways and Motor Vehicles of which he is a member.

Night Fatalities Increasing

During the early stage of their investigation, Senator Plunkett said, a trend chart revealed that since 1921 night fatalities have been increasing at an alarming rate while the rate of day fatalities have been actually decreasing. Further, it was found that from 1933 through 1936 over 60% of all fatal accidents occurred at night when the volume of traffic is only one-quarter that in the daytime. Almost half of the night fatalities occurred in rural areas and very nearly all of those on heavy-traffic State routes.

Adequate Visibility Needed

A study of various reports, the Senator stated, disclosed that poor visibility is blamed for abnormal night accidents by many of the nation's leading traffic experts. He said that headlights must be developed and improved to handle more adequately the visibility problem on the ninety per cent of Massachusetts roads which it would not be economically practical to light. There still remains that ten per cent of major highways where traffic densities and accident experience indicate that headlights have not done and cannot be expected to do an adequate safety job. According to Senator Plunkett, it will be possible to reduce night accidents by 40 to 50 per cent on those highways through the provision of modern safety lighting.

If anyone has any doubts as to the effectiveness of modern highway lighting, Senator Plunkett contends that they need only to inspect, as did his Committee, a modern installation and compare the conditions with those existing on unlighted roads.

Recommends Legislation

"As a result of our complete investigation," said the Senator, "the Joint Legislative Committee on Highways and Motor Vehicles determined to recommend legislation which would give the Department of Public Works enough money to install safety lighting on a limited mileage of heavy traffic State highways of proven night hazards."

"Massachusetts must do something to stem the rapid increase in night fatalities. The motorist is paying plenty for the protection afforded by highway improvement and, personally, I do not believe that there is a motorist in the Commonwealth who will have any objection to the night-time improvement on State routes, provided the action is not carried on indiscriminately."

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

ACTION SNAPS

What action! Must have taken a fast shutter to stop it! Well, no—don't tell anybody, but it was snapped at 1/25 second, approximately box-camera shutter speed. The athlete simply held still for a moment.

PRETTY soon the weather will be opening up, schools will start on their Spring athletic programs, small boys will be knocking battered baseballs around on vacant lots — and your youngster, very likely, will be among them.

These amateur athletics are excellent material for your camera, whether it is a box camera such as most of us have, or one of the new high-speed miniatures.

Of course, with a box camera, you cannot always expect to "stop" rapid action. That is the field of the cameras with high-speed lenses and shutters. But there's no reason why you can't picture action poses — some of them so realistic that people who see them would vow the pictures were high-speed "stop-action" snaps.

Any athlete, proud of his muscles and uniform, should be glad to "hold it" a moment for you. And small boys on neighborhood baseball diamonds cheer when they see a camera coming. They'll hold any pose you want them to.

The low viewpoint is best for action pictures, with the camera tilted slightly upward so that the sky forms the picture background.

Try it, with a young pitcher "winding up" or at the end of his delivery. He can hold his position and expression long enough for you to snap the picture — and the effect is one of genuine rapid action.

"Action" snaps of this sort not only turn out to be good pictures, but also provide plenty of fun. Try some, and see how easily the camera (and your friends) can be fooled.

OXFORD COUNTY UNITED PARISH

Over the week-end we had the pleasure of having with us in the Parish Miss Elizabeth Knox and Leland Hunt. Mr. Hunt preached Sunday morning at North Waterford and Center Lovell. He came as a candidate for the position on the Staff left vacant by Mr. Swank's resignation.

The Young People from the Parish enjoyed the Rally at Norway, Sunday evening, along with the 200 other young people who were present.

Next Sunday is Rural Life Sunday and this thought will be carried into the services of worship in the Parish. Mr. Bull will speak that morning at the Beneficent Church, Providence, R. I.

On Tuesday evening there will be a Circle Supper at North Waterford, you better plan to attend the ball game before the Circle. North Waterford will be playing South Waterford and the "Flat" School, in the Grammar School League.

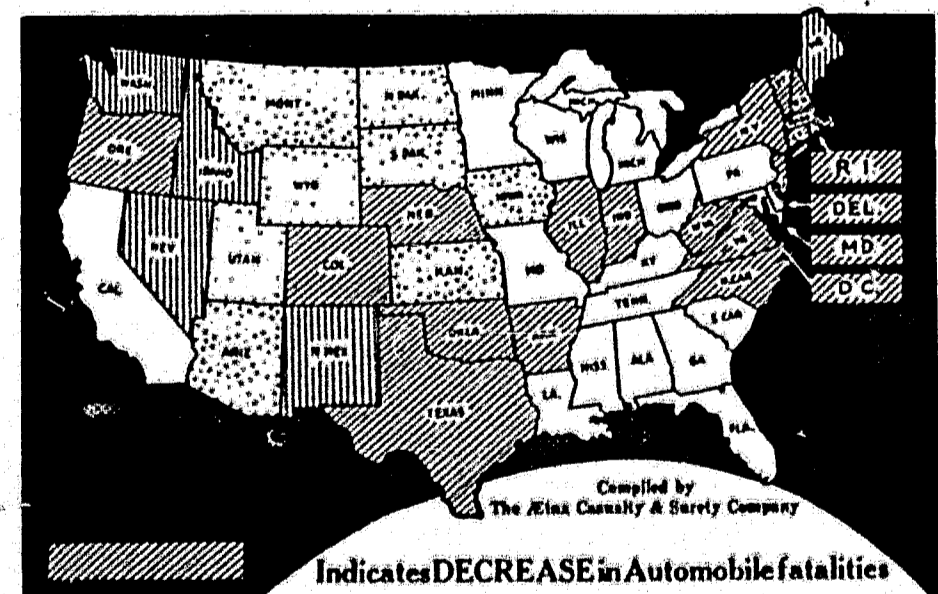

Thursday marks the opening Circle for the season at Hunt's Corner. This is an event for which we have been waiting. We will hope to meet you there.

Memorial Sunday will be very fittingly observed at North Waterford. At that time the "Memorial Hymn Books" will be dedicated. If there are any others who have in mind the thought of giving one of these books in memory of a friend, they should try to see Mrs. Dresser before that time.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

When Bill Reardon gives up his private detective agency to go back to his old job as special investigator for the district attorney, his wife, Sally, takes over the agency to prove that it can be made successful. Her first client quickly entangles her in a murder mystery when Walter Fraser is mysteriously killed in the apartment of Jerry Marlowe, Anne Oakhout's fiancé. Working in competition with her husband who has been assigned to the case, Sally scores first when she proves to Bill that the Marlowe butler is involved in the case. She scores again when she gains admittance to the Fraser apartment and steals a letter written by Anne to Walter Fraser. When she gives the letter to Lola later, Mrs. Fraser destroys it but she gives Sally another clue when she says that on the night of the murder she heard a strange voice using the Marlowe phone. Before she can work on her theory that the mysterious voice was that of Nick Shane, a prominent gambler, Sally and Mrs. Fraser are taken to headquarters for questioning. Sally finally tells Bill about her suspicions regarding Shane. Bill quickly establishes the fact that Shane is missing and, at the Marlowe apartment, he discovers how Shane tapped the telephone wire. He calls the district attorney to announce his discovery only to be informed that Nick Shane had been found murdered in the Reardon apartment with Sally, holding the murder knife, in a dead faint at his side.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Chapter Six

"Where is Sally now?" Bill asked the district attorney.
"The police have her at their apartment," the D. A. replied. With the siren on his police car screaming a warning, Bill broke all speed records to his apartment. He pushed his way through reporters and photographers who were crowding the hall. The policeman guarding the door recognized Bill and admitted him to the apartment.
"Sally!" Bill called as he rushed in. "Where's my wife?" he demanded.
"Take it easy, Bill," one of the detectives said soothingly. "She's okay. She just went into the bathroom."
In the bathroom, meanwhile, Sally had quickly raised the window and climbed out on the narrow ledge of the building. She clutched the bricks with her fingers and, her eyes tight shut, she inched her way along the ledge to the fire escape.
In a moment she had reached the street and she ran to the corner. She hailed the first car that came along and, as it slowed down, her heart sank. It was a police car.
"Well, well, Mrs. Reardon!" the policeman driver said, "what's the trouble?"
"Nothing," Sally replied. "I'm late, though, for a very important appointment. Are you going up Park Avenue—around Fifty-fourth Street?"
"Well, it's a little off my beat," the cop said, "but seein' it's you." He opened the door and Sally hopped in. It was only a few minutes drive in the police car to Sally's destination, Lola Fraser's apartment. Sally jumped out and, after thanking the policeman, rushed into the building.
A maid answered the ring at Mrs. Fraser's apartment. "Mrs. Fraser isn't in," she told Sally. "I'll wait," Sally replied curtly as she swept past the maid into the reception hall.
From another room Lola Fraser called out. "Who is it, Mary?" she asked.
"I think she'll see me," Sally told the maid. "Tell her it's Mrs. Reardon." The maid left the room and Sally looked around quickly. On a table she saw Lola Fraser's purse. She crossed to it quickly, opened it and took out a handkerchief. Crumpling it in her hand, Sally walked away from the table as the maid returned. "Mrs. Fraser will see you," she said.
Sally walked into Lola's boudoir and found the place a shambles of clothes being hastily packed. "Why did you kill Nick Shane?" she asked Lola.

Lola stared at her. "Why," she said, "you're crazy!"
"You don't seem very surprised that he's dead," Sally persisted.
"I'm not," Lola replied. "He was often threatened. People were afraid of him and hated him."
"You feared and hated him too, didn't you?" Sally demanded.
"Yes, I did. But I didn't kill him," Lola said. Sally opened her hand and dangled the handkerchief she had taken from Lola's purse. Mrs. Fraser stared at it, fascinated. "Where—where did you get that?" she asked weakly.
Sally looked at her sympathetically. "I'm sorry, Mrs. Fraser," she said. "I found it beside his body."

Lola stared at her in silence for a long moment then she sat down. "All right," she said quietly. "I killed him."

Back at the Reardon apartment, Sally's escape was soon discovered and a police alarm for her was quickly broadcast. The policeman on radio patrol who had given Sally a lift got the alarm and hurried to the Reardon home. He rushed upstairs and ran over to Bill. "Hey, Bill!" he called breathlessly. "The missus is up at Park Avenue and Fifty-fourth Street!"
"How do you know?" the district attorney demanded.
The policeman gulped. "Because I took her there!" he confessed. Bill snatched his fingers. "Park and Fifty-fourth. That's where Lola Fraser lives. G'mon, let's go!"

An Bill, the district attorney and an assortment of detectives and uniformed police burst into the Fraser apartment. Sally was just hanging up the phone. She looked up and smiled at Bill and handed him a long sheet of paper. "Here it is," she said sweetly.

Bill rushed over to her and took her in his arms. "Darling!" he said. "Are you all right?"

Sally looked at him, puzzled. "Of course I'm all right," she said. "Here's the confession."

Bill was agnostic. "You didn't sign this?" he demanded.

"Of course not, you idiot!" Sally said. "This is Lola Fraser's confession. But she did it in self-defense."

Bill and the district attorney stared at Sally. "What?" she cried. "Lola came to my apartment to see me with no intention of killing anybody," Sally went on. "She was minding her own business but this man Shane followed her and made a row just because Lola told me he was guilty. He pulled a knife on her—one word led to another, and there you are! It's all in the confession."

Bill turned to a detective and motioned to Mrs. Fraser. "Take her down to my office," he said. After they had all gone, Bill and the district attorney sat down with Sally. "How did you know she did it?" the district attorney asked.

"Well," Sally explained, "when I got home, the apartment was filled with her perfume. Then when I accused her and she didn't ask any questions when he was killed, or how one word led to another, it was all in the confession."

Bill looked at Sally admiringly. "And you got a confession out of her with no more than that to go on!" he said.

Sally looked down at her shoes. "Well," she confessed, "I pretended I found her handkerchief beside his body."

"Where did you find it?" the D. A. asked.

"Here," Sally said simply. "In her purse."

Bill got up and turned to the district attorney. "I resign!" he said. "From now on, I'm Sally's office boy."

"You'll help Lola, won't you?" Sally asked the D. A. "It really was self defense, you know. Say, we can plead the unwritten law!" Sally turned to Bill. "That reminds me, darling, what is the unwritten law?"

"Just one more question," Bill said. "Where did you hide that letter?" We tore the house apart looking for it?"

Sally grinned impudently. "In the pocket of your dinner jacket," she said.

Bill took her in his arms. "Would you object," he asked, "if your new office boy gave you a kiss—a very respectful kiss?"

They kissed ardently and Sally buried her head on Bill's shoulder. "Bill," she confessed weakly, "I guess I'm not such a strong character after all!"

The Ship's Figurehead

A ship's figurehead is a bust or full-length figure placed over the cut-water of a ship immediately under the bowsprit. Great expense was formerly lavished on their decoration, the embellishment of stern and prow being superintended by a master carver. The figurehead of the "Sovereign of the Seas" in 1837 represented King Edgar trampling on seven kings. Those ponderous figures were discontinued in the British navy by order of the admiralty in 1796. A number of the older frigates in the United States navy had handsomely carved figureheads in which the name of the vessel suggested some allegorical treatment.

Long for Loneliness

Norwegian girls who have once lived on a "saeter," or mountain pasture with its buildings, begin to long for the lonely life there as soon as spring arrives and will sometimes become ill if they are not allowed to go. Usually the oldest daughter of the family is put in charge of the saeter, where she takes care of the family cattle and sheep during the brilliant days of the Norwegian summer. Cattle, too, sometimes long for the saeter and if they are not well looked after rush away for it as soon as they are out of winter quarters.

Coventry, England, has its first woman mayor since the founding of the city in 1348.

The women of England were skilled in weaving fine linen as early as the Seventh century.

The Tower of London

The Tower of London is a relic looking back upon nearly the full length of England's history. It is rich in continuous associations. As a royal palace it outdates the Kremlin in Moscow, the Doge's palace in Venice, the ancient Seraglio in Stamboul, and the Louvre in Paris. The White tower, from which the castle derives its name, was built by William the Conqueror of Normandy. The work was begun in the year 1078. The tower rises to a height of 90 feet and its walls are from 12 to 15 feet thick. The four sides are of different lengths, and there is not a corner angle which a careful surveyor would pass as correct.

VALENTINE IN AUBURN COURT

Leater Valentine of Bethel was arraigned in Auburn municipal court Monday morning, charged with breaking, entering and larceny at the Tarbox Garage at Mechanic Falls Friday night. Valentine was arrested Saturday morning at a farm in Minot after being notified of the break. Suspicions were directed his way when officers learned he had been about the premises during the day. On arrest Valentine refused to admit the break, but when confronted with finger prints and a cast of foot prints, he led the officers to a spot in the woods where he had concealed the money, about $17.50. He was held in $1000 bonds for superior court action. Unable to furnish bonds, he was committed to await the action of the June term of grand jury.

Gould 5—Livermore Falls 3

Scoring four runs in the first inning and one in the sixth gave Gould Academy a well earned 5-3 victory over Livermore Falls here Wednesday afternoon. McFarland pitched scoreless ball except in the eighth inning when the visitors scored three times on an error, a fielder's choice, and two hits. Besides these two hits only three other hits were allowed by McFarland, one in each of the third, fourth, and seventh innings.

Brown, Wentzell, Tucker, and Dick Crockett each connected for two hits for the winners. Of Livermore's five hits Rhodenizer and Wagner collected two each.

Gould now has five men batting over .300 and the team average is .310. Tucker leads the sluggers with a grand average of .615. The other four leading hitters are Dick Crockett .441, Johnson .406, Brown .393, and Wentzell .303.

When the even was come, they brought unto many that were possessed with devils: and he cast out the spirits, with his word, and healed all that
